

JAPAN COMMUNIST PARTY (JCP) 74:80
MIYAMOTO, CHAIRMAN

1. Inflation

We oppose price increases taken at the initiative of the government. 1) We will revive the legal system by resetting the electric and gas rates and freezing for the time being railway fares, postal charges, and other large public charges. 2) We will invoke laws preventing the hoarding of goods for future sale, the cornering of markets, and price gouging. 3) By revising the Anti-Monopoly Law and publicly disclosing the costs of large corporations, we will regulate monopolistic prices. 4) To hold down inflation, we will reduce the amount of national bonds issued and adjust the money supply to the proper level.

2. Welfare

In order to respond in a comprehensive manner to the aging society, we will, among other measures, raise old age welfare pensions by 40 thousand yen, reform medical treatment to emphasize preventive medical care and health education, and expand regional welfare. Next year is the United Nations Year of the Handicapped; we will, therefore, propose special legislation for the handicapped. We oppose changes in health insurance that will open the way for higher payments and restrictions on physical examinations. In order to increase expenditures for welfare while restricting increases in fees, we will reduce military spending and improve the division of health insurance fees between employers and workers to a ratio of 7 to 3, respectively.

3. Education

In order to realize a thorough education that emphasizes civic morals, aesthetic sentiments, physical strength, and fundamental scholarship, we will realize the attainment of forty student classrooms within five years. We are opposed to the teaching of militarism such as the singing of "Kimigayo." Through campaigns with schools and regions, we will strive to protect children from suicide and delinquency. We will increase the education budget, hold in check increases of school expenses, and reduce the burden of expenses on parents. We will get rid of examination hell and do away with the societal attitudes that overemphasize the importance of academic backgrounds. We support the semi-public election of school board members.

4. Energy

We will end our participation in the sanctions against Iran and strive for stable supplies of oil through expansion of direct negotiations with oil producing countries and through an independent resource diplomacy with neutral and nonaligned countries. We recommend that we revive and develop domestic resources such as coal and hydropower, and change the structure of industry and transportation to one that conserves energy. We will establish a system of research, investigation, and administration for nuclear power that will place priority on safety. We will develop independently and democratically new sources of energy. We will strive to set up an comprehensive energy public corporation.

5. Security and Defense

We oppose all hegemonism by the United States, China, the Soviet Union, and others, and we will strive for an independent peace diplomacy that aims at disarmament and the abolishment of nuclear weapons, the defense of all nations, and the abolishment of all military blocs. The promise made at the U.S.-Japan summit meeting to "share fates" and increase military spending will cause Japanese to make big sacrifices because we will have to cut welfare and increase taxes in order to finance the military buildup. We oppose the strengthening of the U.S.-Japan alliance and the making of Japan into a military power. We will abrogate the security treaty and adopt a nonaligned and neutral defense policy.

6. Political Ethics

The cause of the KDD scandal and other cases of corruption that have tainted all political parties with the exception of the Communist Party is the collection of special privileges by alliance of politicians, bureaucrats, and big business. As the only party not tainted by money politics and corruption, we will exercise the Diet's right to investigate and make a searching inquiry into the structure of corruption. We will forbid political contributions by corporative groups. We will stop "amakudari" by high level officials, establish supervision over administration, and expose dishonesty. By enacting a public information law, we will guarantee the public's right to know and get rid of secrets in administration.

7. Administrative Reform

1) We will completely reorganize the public corporations by reconsolidating KDD and the railway and construction public corporations, and thoroughly reorganizing the gambling institutions. 2) We will abolish "amakudari" and strengthen the supervision of the administration by enacting a public information law. 3) We will reduce the subsidies and the nonessential operations of the National Public Safety Commission and the Self-Defense Forces and strengthen departments such as education and welfare that have a direct bearing on the lives of people. 4) We will get rid of the wasteful "duplicate administration" at the central and local level by transferring much of the authority and revenue sources to the local level.

DEMOCRATIC SOCIALIST PARTY (DSP) 73:80 SASAKI, CHAIRMAN

1. Inflation

1) Oil products and other items experiencing sharp increases in prices will automatically be regarded as designated items under the law preventing the hoarding of goods and the cornering of markets, and we will deal strictly with incidents of price gouging. 2) We will quickly enforce the Anti-Monopoly Law and prevent the formation of cartels to increase prices. 3) Through a thorough modernization and rationalization of public
