

Japan and the Soviet Union.

We will ensure the peace and security of Japan by maintaining the Japan-U.S. security system and expanding our self-defense capability in accordance with our national resources.

6. Education

We place our goals of education policy on developing youth with vitality who are rich in solidarity and public spirit and possess ample creativity and individuality. We want to establish school education with less rigidity that is consonant with moral, intellectual, and physical education. We plan to establish a university of the air, expand the facilities of regional universities, and eliminate the differentials among regions and diversify secondary education. We plan to advance the rationalization and improvement of the common first round and second round entrance examinations to national and public universities.

1. Tax Increase

We are opposed to increased income taxes and the introduction of a general consumption tax. A general consumption tax of 5 percent will bring in revenues of 3 trillion yen and will increase the burden per person by 100 thousand yen, thereby hurting family finances. Financial reconstruction is possible by correcting the unfair tax system and increasing taxes of large corporations and on those who receive income from property and have high incomes. In concrete terms, we can ensure instantly tax revenues of 3 trillion yen by introducing a graduated system to corporate taxes, eliminating the separate tax on interest and dividends and changing to a comprehensive tax, eliminating reserve funds and special amortizations recognized by laws granting special tax exemptions, and constricting the securities ratio of the reserve fund for bad loans and the reserve fund for retirement allowances.

2. Inflation and Energy

It is necessary to restrict price gouging, the hoarding of goods, and the cornering of markets. We will push for the public disclosure of the cost price of petroleum products to prevent instant inflation resulting from price increases in oil and push for reductions in our dependence on imported oil.

From a medium term perspective, we propose to lower our dependence on imported oil from the present 74 percent to 30 percent by establishing a public corporation to develop new energy sources. And with revenues from taxes placed on gasoline, we will promote the development of "soft" energy sources such as hydro, thermal, solar, and wind power. We will systematically promote energy policies to conserve energy by switching the type of energy used in agriculture, extending the number of years manufactured goods are used, and maintaining a comprehensive transportation system. A public corporation to develop domestic coal should be established, and we should strengthen the petroleum public corporation and promote the joint development of oil with oil producing countries. We will stop the building of new nuclear energy plants until the safety of nuclear energy can be established.

3. Political Corruption

We will not permit the coverup of bribery. To get rid of political corruption, we must end the domination of politics by the LDP. We will strengthen the Regulation of Money for Political Activities Act by requiring the public disclosure of contributions to politicians and forbid political contributions by large corporations, which have helped foster political corruption.

We plan to expand the public management of elections, punish severely the pernicious violations of the election law, strengthen the regulation holding a candidate jointly responsible for election law violations committed by his campaign manager or finance officer, and institutionalize the automatic disqualification of elected candidates who are found guilty of criminal offenses. We will strengthen the right to investigate the government, establish a committee to watch over and disclose the audits of accounts of large businesses with regard to their securities dealings, and publicly disclose on a regular basis administrative documents so that the people can watch over the activities of government.

4. Welfare and Expenditures

The 12.6 billion yen surplus in health insurance shows that with the efforts of the people concerned, we can avoid increasing the burden on patients. In an aging society, we must guarantee pensions, medical care, and other bases of livelihood. We will, therefore, not tolerate efforts of self-reliance as advocated by the government and the LDP.

Linking employment and pensions, we regard 45 percent of the average wage as the bottom guaranteed pension. We plan to establish medical care for the aged, such as providing accommodations with nurses and visiting medical services.

5. Diplomacy and Defense

The Soviet threat is being used as a pretext to increase Japan's armaments. Through a positive neutrality diplomacy of peace, we will promote the reduction of both nuclear and non-nuclear weapons, expand economic cooperation with China, conclude a peace treaty with the Soviet Union, abolish the security treaty with the U.S., realize the return of all the Kurile Islands, establish a system of peace guarantees that would include the U.S., China, and the U.S.S.R., and convert Southeast Asia into a region of peace, liberty, and neutrality.

We will actively work towards the reduction of the self-defense forces and other means in order to build a peaceful world.

6. Education

The cause of back door admissions to schools is because the entrance decisions based on faculty meeting deliberations are not being adhered to. The Ministry of Education must display strong leadership.

It is necessary to improve high school entrance examinations by making school districts smaller. University entrance examinations will move toward a more comprehensive system that includes, in addition to paper tests, essays and interviews. It is also necessary to abolish the system of eliminating candidates who have failed to score a certain number of points on the first round, to improve the common first round entrance examinations so that private universities can participate, and to improve the second round examinations.

TAKEIRI, CHAIRMAN

1. Tax Increase

We are resolutely opposed to a general consumption tax, an increase in income taxes, and other increased taxes on people that would compel sacrifices by the people and put pressure on the family finances and corporate management.

We will not pursue financial reconstruction through one-sided burdens on the people, as the government advocates. Rather, we propose to decide on a medium term plan. We plan to secure tax revenues by realizing stable economic growth, revising
