1. Inflation

1) We will control prices through the enforcement of relevant laws (生活二法) and thus prevent the hoarding of goods for future sale and the cornering of markets. 2) Through the strengthened enforcement of the Anti-Monopoly Law, we will regulate price increases from collusion by secret cartels. 3) We will hold down public utility charges and establish a system of welfare fees. 4) We will step up the production of fresh food, improve the distribution machinery, and regulate the manipulation of fish prices by large capitalists. 5) We will regulate land prices through laws of planned land use. 6) We will continue the policy of planned demand management.

2. Welfare

We will realize the establishment of minimum standards for housing, pensions, education, work, health, and public aid. We will realize a health insurance system that abolishes outside payments, and, through a fair payments based on the ability to pay achieve, we will provide equal benefits for the beneficiary and his family. Through government expenditures and coordination among institutions, we will establish a system of insurance for old age medical treatment. We will raise the level of payments of the basic pension and tie the level of payment to the age of retirement and the number of years spent in the system. We will enact legislation to expand employment and extend the retirement age. We will establish lifetime security and expand facilities for old people and the handicapped.

3. Education

We will establish organs (parent councils, council on educational issues, etc.) with the cooperation of parents, teachers, and administrators that will promote children's education and reexamine existing education. On the basis of developing the individuality of children and students, we will improve lifetime education directed at the fundamental quality of education. We will revise the qualifying examination system, and we will promote the participation of private universities in the first round common entrance examination and the qualified introduction of a system that allows the mutual transfer of university and accumulated credits.

4. Energy

1) We will promote the introduction and development of energy conservation and substitute energy sources, and thereby reduce our level of dependence on oil. 2) We will strive to diversify and ensure our supplies of oil, coal, LNG, and other types of overseas sources of energy. 3) We will promote the research and development of domestic sources of energy such as hydropower and thermal heat, plus new types of energy such as solar electric cells and biomass, giving due consideration to environmental conservation. 4) The construction of nuclear power plants will depend on environmental assessments, strict investigations into their safety, and the agreement of surrounding residents.

5. Security and Defense

Based on the Five Principles of Peace, we will establish a comprehensive peace and security policy. Although we aim to abrogate the security treaty with the U.S. through diplomatic negotiations, we will continue to observe the treaty for the time being. We will protect the Peace Constitution, and we oppose the policy of the LDP and the government to enact emergency law legislation and increases in military power. We will investigate the possibility of reorganizing of the Self-Defense Forces into a national service corps, and for the meantime we will limit their duties to strictly defense while strengthening and maintaining civilian control. We will promote a complete nuclear disarmament and a thorough arms reduction, and establish a nuclear free zone in Asia and the Pacific region.

6. Political Ethics

We will forbid corporate contributions to political funds and allow contributions only by individuals. We will also make it an obligation for individual politicians to disclose their political expenditures and revenues. We will liberalize election campaigns, strengthen the penalties for corruption, speed up court cases, strengthen regulations holding a candidate jointly responsible for election law violations committed by his campaign manager or finance officer, and banish money politics in elections. We will establish a Diet committee on political ethics and enact a general plan for political ethics that will set a standard for political and moral behavior. We will strengthen regulations dealing with crimes of corruption and strengthen the enforcement of laws regarding Diet testimony in order to fulfill the Diet's investigative capability.

7. Administrative Reform

By reorganizing the Administrative and Management Agency into an administrative committee and establishing in the Diet a special committee on administration and public finances, we will promote reforms that will strengthen the management system. We will reduce at every level the number of personnel in the central bureaucratic agencies and their local agencies, reorganize the public corporations and deliberation councils, and promote the regulation of licensed corporations. We will lengthen the period to five years during which "amakudari" is forbidden. We will strengthen the authority of the Board of Audit. We will democratize administration by enacting a public information law and introduce an ombudsmen system.
